A new event for tax preparers launches this summer

NATP announces Taxposium, where tax pros connect with ideas, insights and each other

APPLETON, Wis. (April 18, 2022) – A new event for all tax professionals will be taking the industry by storm when NATP hosts its first-ever Taxposium this summer. Thought leadership, tax education and an exchange of insights and ideas take center stage July 25-28 at Ceasars Palace, Las Vegas.

The four-day event will feature 50 education sessions to develop practical skills and gain critical knowledge led by more than 30 industry speakers. Attendees will enjoy visiting with more than 40 exhibitors whose products and services are specific to their needs.

In addition to education on tax topics, Taxposium sessions have been expanded to include themes such as marketing your firm in the modern age, healthy leadership and future-proofing your team.

The first day will conclude with a two-hour welcome reception with exhibitors. Also planned is a live, interactive 'Ask the Experts' panel discussion, an inspiring keynote address on reaching creative potential and networking time in the social lounge; a place to chat, relax, play a game or recharge.

"We designed the Taxposium to be a one-of-a-kind event that meets the evolving needs of tax preparers in this ever-changing environment," said Caroline Smith, NATP's director of professional development. "NATP is proud to be able to meet the needs of industry professionals. Taxposium is the leading event bringing taxpayers together for the shared purpose of developing their skills so they can deliver excellence to their clients, the country's taxpayers.

Industry-related vendors interested in attending the Taxposium should email strategicrelations@natptax.com for exhibition opportunities.

The Taxposium registration is now open. Questions relating to the event or NATP can be directed to Nancy Kasten by emailing nkasten@natptax.com. To learn more about the National Association of Tax Professionals, visit natptax.com.
