NATP hires new Director of Tax Content and Government Relations

Tom O’Saben joins the NATP team with 30+ years of tax preparation and continuing education expertise

APPLETON, Wis. (Aug. 31, 2022) – Tom O’Saben, EA, joins the National Association of Tax Professionals (NATP) team as its Director of Tax Content and Government Relations. In this role, O’Saben will lead NATP’s tax content team to ensure members, tax professionals and NATP staff have access to content and information that is timely, meaningful and relevant.

O’Saben has already begun his work analyzing and interpreting the tax implications of the Inflation Reduction Act, signed by President Biden on Aug. 16, 2022. The remainder of 2022, under O’Saben’s direction, the NATP tax content team will monitor and analyze tax news to interpret implications on NATP members’ work during the upcoming tax season.

“I’m delighted to join the NATP team of tax content experts,” O’Saben said. “After being an instructor for NATP for many years, it’s an honor to transition into this leadership role where I can help guide NATP staff and our members through complicated tax changes and planning, both during the tax filing season and also throughout the year.”

O’Saben has worked as a tax preparer for more than 30 years, owning his own firm from 2008 to 2019. He has maintained his enrolled agent designation since he first earned it in 1994, which allows him to represent clients before the IRS.

O’Saben and the other experts at NATP are continuously monitoring industry news to provide its members with timely updates on how tax law change and other updates may affect their businesses and the tax returns of U.S. taxpayers.
